

Bitter Parents Seek to End Strike

A march by angry parents, a demonstration by striking teachers, the arrest of a picket and another fruitless negotiating session Monday heightened the frustration caused by the teachers' strike in the Jefferson Union High School District.

No progress was reported by the district or the teachers following negotiations Monday. Another session was scheduled this morning.

Determined to bring an end to the strike, now in its 15th day, a group of 25 parents paraded into Superintendent Floyd Gonella's office shortly after noon and presented him with a petition.

Signed by the 25 parents, the petition declared, "We have and will continue to take drastic measures to convince you that we want our children back in school receiving a quality education... You are our employee and we direct you to end the strike."

After explaining their exasperation to Gonella, the parents marched over to the offices of the teachers' union, Local 1481 of the American Federation of Teachers, and gave union officials an identical petition.

The march was organized by the Parents Action Committee to End the Strike, which claims credit for a student boycott last Friday that drastically reduced pupil attendance.

Maxine Gonsalves, head of PACES, said the group is planning another student boycott beginning Wednesday that will last until the strike is over. Mrs. Gonsalves is a counselor with the San Francisco Unified School District.

Among those in the line were two Pacifica mothers, Carol McNesby and Nancy Markey, who said their sons each had learning disabilities and can't attend school until the strike is over because no special instruction is available.

Joyce Lewbin of Daly City said she intends to keep her son out of Serramonte High School until the strike is over "because I don't think he would receive an adequate education. And it's not safe."

Esther Price of Daly City said her daughter, also assigned to Serramonte, considers school to be a "big waste of time and a waste of the taxpayers' money."

Gonella listened patiently while parents called for an end to the strike. Some of the angriest comments came from

Ralph Damon of Daly City, who said, "I feel I'm being ripped off by this school district. You're not telling what you are trying to accomplish and why."

Gonella replied that only one issue is keeping the teachers and district from ratifying a contract.

That issue is the legality of putting $527,000 currently in the district's bond fund into teachers' wages. Gonella said the district can't promise that sum to the teachers until a legal authority rules it can be spent on wages, since the money was raised from the electorate specifically for capital improvements to school facilities and emergency expenses.

"The strike is not an emergency," Gonella remarked.

"Oh yes it is!" yelled the parents.

Asked why he didn't go to court immediately and demand a ruling on the legality of using the $527,000 for teachers' wages, Gonella replied that the district is prepared to go to court over the matter.

He explained that there are two legal questions: Whether the district can pay $527,000 out of its bond fund into teachers' salaries and whether raises in teachers' salaries are legal at all. He pointed out that the state legislature has forbidden raises in public employee salaries.

When a parent asked how the district could pay substitute teachers more than the usual pay scale, Gonella said, "That is different. Substitutes are in a different category allowed under emergency situations."

Another parent shouted, "You just said this wasn't an emergency situation!" Gonella finally calmed the angry parents by assuring them that the district was doing everything possible to end the strike.

A few parents then marched over to AFT's office, where teachers accepted a copy of their petition.

Mike Tugendreich of AFT maintains that the district could find the additional $527,000 if it wanted to. "We have said to the district, 'If you're concerned about the legality of paying the $527,000 to the teachers, don't take the money out of the bond fund — take it out of the General Fund,'" he said, explaining that the district could pay for items currently funded

Long Days, Short Nights

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Too many nights of too little sleep are reflected on their faces. Their eyes are framed with dark circles, their complexions are pale.

Small wonder, for these two people shoulder the responsibility of settling the three-week-old teachers' strike in the Jefferson Union High School District.

Marcy Dunne Ballard, president of the teachers' union, spends most of her waking hours staring across formica tables at eight familiar faces. Three of them belong to other members of her union's bargaining team. Three belong to district bargaining representatives. The other two belong to state mediators.

Superintendent Floyd Gonella is seldom far away. Although he does not sit on the district's bargaining team, he has made a point in recent days of being close to the scene of negotiations to define the district's stand.

Gonella and Mrs. Ballard drink the same stale coffee, haven't eaten a decent meal in ages and generally are found with one ear attached to a telephone.

They agree that the big roadblock in negotiations is wages. But, each believes the other is responsible for the inability of the teachers and the district to agree on a contract.

Specifically, the wages in question are for last year. The teachers' contract that expired June 30 contained a

FLOYD GONELLA

"We can't pay"

"reopener clause" that promised a raise in 1977-78 if the district had available funds. When negotiations on the reopener clause began last fall, the district said it had no spare money available. Eleven months later, the district maintained that stand.

This summer, some teachers took a close look at the district's books and decided the district had hidden $1.5 million in a bond fund so the money couldn't be used for teachers' wages.

The district replied that the bond fund monies could be used only for school improvement projects, not wages.

A fact-finder finally interceded and decided the district could spend $636,664 of the fund on teachers' salaries. Meanwhile, Proposition 13 went into effect and the state legislature passed a law forbidding wage hikes for public employees.

At first, the district argued that it could not raise teachers' salaries because doing so would jeopardize the district's chances of receiving its share of Prop. 13 bail-out monies.

Mrs. Ballard and Gonella said Friday they finally have agreed that the union and the district will fight as a team if anyone challenges the legality of giving the teachers $636,664.

Mrs. Ballard appears confident that the teachers will have no trouble proving their legal right to the money. Gonella is pessimistic.

"The futility of it all is really bothering me because we've gone to all levels — the state and the county — and everyone has told us we cannot pay this money. Yet we are hopeful," he said, stressing that the district believes the teachers deserve a raise.

Last weekend, the teachers and district agreed to put another $527,000 on the table. Added to the $636,664 already promised, that sum would give the teachers a 7½ percent raise retroactive to Feb. 1, 1978.

But the district attached a condition, saying that the $527,000, which would be drawn from the district's bond fund, could be used for teachers' salaries only if a court determined that was legal.

MARCIE BALLARD

"We deserve it"

The teachers refused to go along with that stipulation, demanding that the district take the money from its General Fund if legal authorities find it illegal to use bond funds on salaries.

The teachers accused the district of preparing to fight rather than defend their right to the $527,000 in court. The district replied that the teachers' conviction that they would lose in court proves that they, too, believe that the $527,000 isn't legally theirs.

Mrs. Ballard repeatedly has criticized the district for being "inflexible." She explained that the teachers made a major concession this week when they withdrew binding arbitration from the bargaining table.

Binding arbitration is a form of settling disputes that forces both sides to submit to the findings of an impartial arbitrator. Teachers fought for this right last year but it was not part of their most recent contract.

"The union dropped binding arbitration in order to create more movement on wages. The district keeps offering us the same amount of money rearranged in different packages," Mrs. Ballard said. Gonella isn't sure the teachers made a big concession.

"I am not clear yet what they want, but they keep bringing up various methods of advisory arbitration that must be included in the contract," he remarked.

Advisory arbitration is the current method of settling disputes. As the current strike illustrates, it doesn't always work. But strings may be attached to advisory arbitration to make it more forceful.

While Mrs. Ballard has her gaze fixed steadily on more money, Gonella is convinced the teachers can be won over with a package deal of slightly higher wages and generous fringe benefits.

Each considers the other to be extremely stubborn. But, they surely view one another with more respect than at the beginning of the

Colma Girl Beats 'Gate'

Daily practice paid off for Lorelei Morino when, on Monday, she became the youngest person to swim under the Golden Gate Bridge.

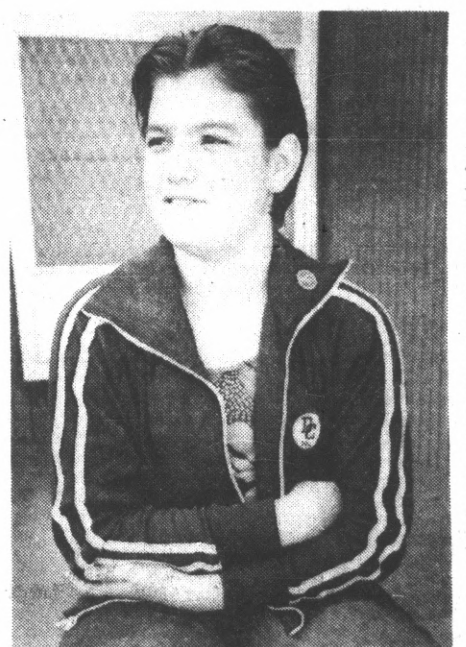

The 12-year-old Colma resident made the swim from Fort Point in San Francisco to Lime Rock in Marin County in 40 minutes and 54 seconds under the watchful eye of the Coast Guard. The youngest person to swim a parallel route was Bruce Farley of Belmont who accomplished the feat in 1965 at the age of eight. He negotiated the course in 52 minutes.

Lorelei was accompanied by her father, James Morino, who was making the swim for the 22nd time. His best time from shore to shore is 29 minutes. The world record is 21 minutes.

The only difficult part of the swim, according to Lorelei, was the last 10 minutes, due to changing tides. She said it only took her a few seconds to become used to the water temperature, which was 56 degrees at the time she made the swim.

Although Lorelei began swimming at age 5, she said she wasn't a good swimmer until a year ago, when she began taking lessons and took up competitive swimming with the Daly City Dolphins Aquatic Club, whose 40 members range in age from 6 to 18.

Her father said he couldn't have ordered more perfect weather for the swim. He also was pleased that there wasn't heavy traffic through the Golden Gate when he and Lorelei were swimming. "We lucked out. Sometimes you run into freighters and container ships out there," he remarked. He attributes Lorelei's success to consistent practice. He said, "She swims every day, five days a week, two hours a day."

Even older swimmers have problems with the treacherous currents under the bridge. Morino said during one year, 17 of 66 swimmers who attempted the swim were not able to finish.

Lorelei said it was her mother's idea that she make the swim. Roz Morino remarked proudly after her daughter completed the swim,

"I'm so glad that it's a girl who holds the new record."

Mrs. Morino said it was difficult for women to attempt the swim until recently, when the Dolphin Swimming and Boating Club allowed females to use its formerly all-male changing facilities at Aquatic Park in San Francisco.

Lorelei seemed most impressed with the media coverage of her swim. "I told the kids at school I was going to do this but they wouldn't believe me," she explained.

Rental Subsidy Housing Put Off

Day Care OK Applauded

A federally-subsidized housing project, a day care center and a housing rehabilitation program were the most controversial topics discussed by the Daly City City Council Monday night.

About 75 persons crowded into the council chamber to participate in a public hearing scheduled on a proposed zoning change that would allow Thomas L. Safran to build a 42-unit housing project at the northeast intersection of Hyde Court and King Drive.

Safran said he had submitted his plans to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, hoping to receive federal subsidies that would pay up to 70 percent of rental costs of units rented to the poor. The rental cost of each unit is expected to exceed $500 per month.

Although Safran admitted he had heard that HUD intends to reject his plans, he urged the council to consider the proposed zoning change since he expects to submit a new site plan to HUD in the near future. Safran said, "HUD doesn't want to waste its time with a proposal that the city won't accept."

But the council members decided they didn't want to waste their time with a proposal that HUD might turn down. At City Attorney Albert Polonsky's suggestion, they continued the public hearing on the zoning change for 60 days and referred the matter back to the Planning Commission for a study on the feasibility of zoning the area PD — Planned Development. PD zoning would allow the council very close control over the type of project built.

Obviously relieved that the council didn't have to sit through hours of testimony by the citizens present, Mayor William Schumacher asked the audience for a straw vote on the project. About 50 persons opposed it and roughly 25 favored it.

Another group of 15 residents were on hand to urge the council to allow the Creative Expression Center at 4496 Callan Blvd. to care for up to 20 instead of six mentally handicapped children.

Parents told the council that the center provided excellent care for their children.

The council voted to expand the day care center's use permit so it can serve up to 14 children of ages 4 to 14. The parents applauded their approval. Two citizens representing the Anti-Crime League of Daly City were less enchanted with the council's decision to extend a rehabilitation program consultant's contract for another 45 days.

Ernest Pezzola told the council the consultant isn't necessary because about 30 applications already have been processed and merely are awaiting federal funding. That federal funding may not come for several months, Pezzola said.

Conrad Pavellas said the consulting firm, Connerly and Associates of Sacramento, initially won his group's confidence but recently had proven unable to follow through with proposals.

Councilman James Tucker said he was sorry to hear about their dissatisfaction but said he believed it would be a mistake not to extend Connerly's funding, since federal funding could come at any time.

Polonsky urged the council to extend the contract, pointing out that Connerly would not be used unless there was work to be done.

The council unanimously approved an extension of Connerly's funding through

Commentary

It's a 'No-Win' Battle

Whatever happened to the fine old art of compromise?

America's earliest residents had the system down pat. When grievances developed, they'd light up a peace pipe. Today's Americans have a different attitude. The first thought that comes into their minds is "Sue!"

A CASE in point is the 3½-week-old teachers' strike in the Jefferson Union High School District. Instead of talking out their differences, the district and teachers keep appealing to the courts to settle their arguments.

The fact that a judge finally declared the strike illegal solved nothing since he said the teachers still can strike if they wish to take the risk of being found in contempt of court.

So the teachers are not teaching, students are not learning and administrators are spending more time negotiating and on TV and radio than administering.

THIS clearly is a "no win" situation. There is no right and wrong side. A solution can be found only when both sides are willing to bend a little.

Last week I saw how far a legal battle can go when I attended a hearing before the American Arbitration Association. Settling suits through this organization supposedly is faster and cheaper than going through the courts.

But I sat there for three hours listening to two attorneys battle about whether the case should be heard by the arbitrators at all.

After a closed session, the panel of arbitrators finally agreed they would hear the case. The lawyer who had fought that hearing said, "Well, I'm going to seek an injunction against this hearing right now."

THE HEARING had to be adjourned while the lawyers went to another county to battle the injunction issue before a judge. Incidentally, this was the sixth stalling tactic tried by the same attorney over a two-year period. Although he lost his plea for an injunction, he informed the arbitrators that he would find it necessary to appeal any decision they made.

Nor would that be the end of things. The attorney who seemed to be winning the case told me, "This is only the start. Even if we win, we will have to collect the money from these creeps." That could take another few years.

AMERICANS are becoming so afraid of lawsuits that they are changing their living patterns. I know one family with a pool that refuses to allow their friends to swim in it, because one little girl once broke her leg on the diving board. Another family I'm acquainted with has stopped serving alcohol at parties, for fear that they would be liable for an accident caused by a drunken guest driving home.

Then there is the couple I know who offered a new acquaintance a ride to a concert out of town. The three chatted pleasantly in the car until the guest announced abruptly, "I think it's only fair to tell you that if you are involved in a car crash, I will have every right to sue you."

The conversation dwindled after that. What would people do without the court system to settle their arguments for them? For one thing, they might be forced to sit down and iron out their differences of opinion themselves.

Talks

strike, when each seemed certain that the opposition would crumble quickly.

As the talks continue day after day, the strike is taking its toll.

In monetary terms, it means that the average teacher is losing $112 per teaching day, plus medical and dental benefits every day and the district, according to Gonella, is losing $7,600 per day.

In human terms, the price is even higher: Students are not getting an education.

WITHOUT having to explain all the details to a third party, they probably would solve their problems more quickly. And they certainly would keep a lot fewer lawyers and judges busy.

How nice it would be if Americans learned to smoke peace pipes again.

Pacifica Teachers In Work Slowdown

Pacifica elementary school teachers are continuing to participate in a work "slowdown" to emphasize their dissatisfaction with contract negotiations.

A mediator from the state Public Employee Relations Board is coming into the Laguna Salada School District Wednesday to try to settle the remaining differences.

Anne Shea, president of the Laguna Salada Educational Association, said a slowdown means that teachers will not participate in any after-school activities.

Teachers are not doing any planning or correcting after school nor are they participating in back-to-school nights taking place in local schools now, Mrs. Shea said.

"We're just not putting in any extra time," she said.

Assistant Superintendent Marv Morganti said the slowdown is having "no effect" on the classroom, although he has noticed that "considerably" fewer parents are attending back-to-school nights because they cannot meet the teachers.

Teachers voted last week to provide only "minimum services" to the district, Mrs. Shea said, adding they are still acting within the contract.

Pacifica elementary school teachers are upset, she said, that the district has withdrawn several contract proposals from the bargaining table.

At its last session with teachers, Mrs. Shea said, the district withdrew proposals putting a cap on the number of seventh and eighth grade students a teacher will have contact with and a proposal stating that teachers will not have to do noon-duty supervision.

Another proposal that has been withdrawn, she said, is a "reopener" stating that teacher salaries can be renegotiated if the state law is changed.

Restraining Order Issued In SSF Condominium Sale

A temporary restraining order has been issued to prevent the developers of Colina Condominiums in South San Francisco from disbursing $1.1 million in an escrow account.

The developers, Grubb and Ellis, last week reportedly sold the third phase of the condominium development on Westborough Boulevard to Fair-Leggett Development Co.

The Colina Homeowners Association, according to its attorney James Cooke, requested the restraining order be issued and at the same time filed a lawsuit against Grubb and Ellis.

Superior Court Judge Melvin Cohn issued the restraining order Friday.

Cooke said the association did not want the $1.1 million being held in an escrow account to be disbursed. The group contends, he said, that the money should not be disbursed until repairs are made on the 93 condominiums in the first phase of the development.

Cooke said that Grubb and Ellis has retained ownership of the first phase but has sold the second and third phases to Fair-Leggett.

out of its General Fund with bond fund monies.

Tugendreich said the district is willing to fight in court with the teachers about the legality of $636,664 already promised to the teachers, but plans to battle the teachers over the additional $527,000. "The district wants to have it both ways and they can't," he remarked.

Student representatives of all six of the district's schools who sit on the Student Advisory Board have scheduled a protest rally for 3:15 p.m. Wednesday in front of the district's offices at the Westlake Shopping Center. Following the rally, the students plan to march into Superintendent Gonella's office.

Two incidents were reported by police patrolling the teachers' picket lines Monday. Daly City police arrested Lloyd F. Zimmerman, 51, of Washington, D.C. at 7:15 a.m. Monday on suspicion of malicious mischief.

According to police, Zimmerman, who was identified as a representative of AFT's national office in Washington, D.C., was observed by police to be scratching the paint on the truck of a non-striking maintenance employee at the entrance to the district's bus yard.

Zimmerman was cited and released on a promise to appear in court Oct. 20.

Pacifica police watched a group of about 40 picketing teachers parade through the hallways of Terra Nova High School later on Monday, where police said they disturbed some classes. No arrests were made.

Both the district and AFT reported higher attendance figures for Monday than Friday, when attendance was affected by a student boycott staged by PACES.

AFT reported 50 percent attendance by students and 26 percent attendance by teachers Monday, compared to 34 percent attendance by students and 26 percent attendance by teachers Friday.

The district reported 62 percent student attendance and 48 percent teacher attendance Monday, compared to 48 percent student attendance and 29 percent teacher attendance Friday.

Council

Nov. 15 for a fee of up to $35 per hour.

Pavellas and Pezzola also opposed the hiring of three additional staff members for the rehabilitation program. "We don't want you to create a bureaucratic nest for people who will later be difficult to dislodge," Pavellas said, adding, "We would like to see the program working before the staff is hired."

One member of the Rehabilitation Advisory Committee, which proposed increasing the staff, urged the council to reconsider. Two other committee members said the additional staff is necessary to do all the work.

The council voted unanimously to hire the additional staff.

In other business the council:

DOCUMENT FEES — Three citizens complained during the "open mike" portion of the meeting about the city's policy of charging residents for copies of agendas and minutes. Roseanne Emerson noted that the council had been able to restore other services and should return to its previous policy of providing documents at no charge.

RECREATION FEES — Schumacher said he was disturbed that few youths are using the city's gyms because of new recreational charges. The council referred its recently-enacted recreational fee schedule back to the Recreation and Parks Commission for further study.

APPOINTMENTS — Shellee Garrett, Tom Norris, Mary Davenport and Walter Schultz were appointed to the General Plan Citizens Advisory Committee. William Sereni, Aldo Simonetti and Jo Ann Reddy were appointed to the Redevelopment Project Area Committee.

SUBDIVISION — The

council denied on a 3-2 vote a request by Donald J. Seyranian that he be permitted to divide two lots on Castle Street into two. The council previously had voted 2-2 on the matter and tabled it until Councilman Anthony Giammona returned from his annual summer-long vacation. Giammona nixed the proposal, noting that the lots would be too narrow.

FOOD STAMPS — Although the city is losing money issuing food stamps, the council directed its staff to continue negotiating for more money from the county, rather than discontinue the service.

ANTI-CRIME — The Anti-Crime League received four-year Housing and Community Development Act funding of $10,000.

BALLET — The council gave the Daly City Civic Ballet Co. permission to use the City Hall rotunda to present a free dance concert Oct. 22.

Drivers Guided A Dying Man

Two drivers were recommended for special commendations by a California Highway Patrol officer last week for guiding the car of a dying man some three miles across the San Mateo-Hayward Bridge last week and thus preventing a major accident.

According to a coroner's investigator, Theodore Wayne, 69, of 2128 Lexington Ave., San Mateo, was driving westbound on the bridge at 6:10 p.m. Sept. 13 when he apparently suffered a fatal heart attack at the wheel of his car.

Officer Dave Hellman said that Sam S. Passansi, 39, of Marysville, noticed Wayne slump at the steering wheel and his car scrape against the curb of the bridge.

Even though Wayne's auto was traveling some 50 miles per hour with his foot pressed against the accelerator, Hellman said, Passansi pulled his pickup truck in front of Wayne's car in an attempt to slow it down.

Seeing what was happening, Hellman reported, David Vaughn Olander, 21, of 724 Hill Ave., South San Francisco, pulled his van in front of the two vehicles.

"Between the two of them they stopped him three miles later just before the high rise," Hellman reported. Otherwise, Hellman said, "he would have most likely driven into the railing at the high rise and gone over or caused a major collision accident."

Wayne was pronounced dead at Mills Memorial Hospital at 7:50 p.m., Hellman reported. He recommended both drivers be awarded official letters of commendation from the Highway Patrol.

The club's tour bus will begin picking up members tomorrow morning at 7:30 a.m. for a day long junket that will include a cruise and luncheon on the Channel Star and a wine tasting session in Lodi.

Mrs. Edna Laurel Calhan, tour chairman for the group, has arranged the day's agenda, and she is hopeful that a bus load of enthusiastic tour takers will be joining in the fun.

Tickets, being handled by Mrs. Elizabeth Rentmeester, are $20 per person and that includes everything; even the tip to the bus driver. The bus will return passengers to Pacifica at approximately 5 p.m.

Tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. members and friends of the Daly City chapter of Friends of the Library will assemble to hear Librarian Samuel Chandler give the first book review of the fall.

Mrs. Lorraine Sandefur is the chairman of the book review and she has announced that a coffee will proceed the program. The meeting is being held in the cultural room of the Serramonte Library.

The Daly City Dolphins have been swimming up a storm in their "borrowed" training area in the Orange Park Pool in South San Francisco.

The struck Jefferson High school district has closed Westmoor pool for the duration of the strike and the team was forced to cancel the meet slated for Daly City in September but training continues as the swimmers prepare for the Oct. 14 and 15 meet with the Surfriders.

Persons wishing to join the team should be advised that swimmers meet at the Westmoor pool every day at 4:30 and car pool to South San Francisco to practice swimming from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Two nights of fun and games are being arranged by the members of the Holy Angels Women's Guild and the Men's Club as the preparations are made for the annual two night Monte Carlo party.

This event offers members of the parish and their friends a opportunity to enjoy bingo, poker, blackjack and other games of chance using script money and winning premiums. Each year hundreds of persons join in the fun in the parish hall, located at 107 San Pedro road in Colma.

According to Mrs. Diane Leonetti, publicity chairperson, there will be no admission charge on the opening night, Friday, Oct. 13. On Saturday, Oct. 14, there will be a $1.50 admission charge to help defray the cost of a buffet which will be provided at 10 p.m.

If you enjoy horse racing, Mrs. Shirley McKee, publicity person for the Westlake Catholic Women, notes that Oct. 18 is the day selected for the annual "Day at the Races" sponsored by the WCV.

Mrs. Dario Baciocco is chairperson for this event which is open to men and women of the Our Lady of Mercy Parish and their friends.

Tickets are on sale for $10 per person. Ticket holders will be admitted to the track and served luncheon in the Turf Club at Bay Meadows without further cost.

For information about tickets or concerning transportation call Mrs. Baciocco at once. Tickets are limited and will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

There is no space left on that Reno bound bus chartered by the members of the Mary's Help Hospital Guild for Oct. 10 and 11.

Mrs. Virginia Stanghellini, the chairman of the two day rest and relaxation trip, reports that a waiting list does exist and if you failed to call in your reservation prior to the time the bus was filled, you still have an opportunity to go if someone cancels out at the last minute.

The price of this trip is $30 and that includes bus fare and lodging at the Riviera Motel in Reno. Tour members will receive rebates of $16 upon their arrival in Reno.

Call Mrs. Stanghellini for more information.

THRILLS

Scaring people half to death is the business of the Arrow Development Co.

THINGS TO COME

One of the new rides developed by the company's headquarters in Arrow Development Co. is tested at Mountain View.

A LITTLE SLOWER

The Barney Oldfield Speedway is one of the slower rides designed and installed by Arrow Development Co. for Marriott's Great America. The Mountain View firm is the world's largest manufacturer of thrill rides.

Small, Quiet Company Takes Off Like a Rocket

By VERN KROGH
Thirty-two years ago, the Arrow Development Co. was a small machine shop doing job work for nearby firms.

It was surrounded by the fields and orchards of the Santa Clara Valley.

Today the Mountain View company grosses some $50 million a year.

Its main purpose is to scare you half to death.

In a little over three decades the company has grown to be the largest manufacturer of thrill rides in the world — surpassing such competitors as Anton Schwarzkopf of West Germany, Riverchon of France and Soli of Italy.

It has rides such as "The Corkscrew," the "Terrifying Tidal Wave" and "Flying Turns" not only in nearly every major amusement park in the nation but in parks in Europe and Japan as well.

It employs from 130 to 220 people, including design engineers from the electronics industry, the automotive industry, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Lockheed Space and Missiles.

It really started, according to James H. Sheldon, vice president for marketing, with the "crazy dream" of Walt Disney in the early 1950s.

At that point the company had broadened into the making of small kiddie rides, including a merry-go-round in a San Jose municipal park, a few portable rides at a Palo Alto shopping center and a miniature railroad in Sacramento.

"Walt Disney was always a backyard railroad buff," says Sheldon, "and when he saw our railroad he came to us with a scheme to build an amusement park in Anaheim like no other that ever had been built."

"We worked with his creative staff, and sometimes they wanted us to do the impossible," Sheldon, a former marketing executive with Hewlett-Packard, says. "We worked with them and, one way or another, we got at least a close approximation."

The result was The Mat-terhorn, the Dumbo ride, Auto-Rama and conveyance systems for other rides.

Arrow was on its way. Now the company has designed, installed or manufactured rides for almost every major amusement park in the United States, including Knott's Berry Farm, Magic Mountain in Southern California, Busch Gardens, Taft Park in Cincinnati, Loch Ness in Williamsburg, Pa., and Marriott's Great America in Santa Clara.

With the cost of each ride varying from $1 million to $3½ million, it is not difficult to see how quickly the company grosses $50 million annually.

Arrow, essentially, does three things, according to Sheldon:

It resurrects old rides with new technologies.

It creates new rides.

It builds rides based on input from its customers.

Sheldon emphasizes, however, "Any new ride we build today is really an extension of the past."

The "Corkscrew" and other upside-down rides and the roller coaster tracks were developed in Paris in 1848 and at Coney Island in 1902.

Flume rides are an outgrowth of the old "Shoot-the-Chutes."

Suspended rides were originally developed by the Messerschmitt Co. for the Oktoberfest in Germany.

"Often, however," Sheldon continues, "a good idea was implemented poorly. We try to avoid what

'CORKSCREW'

The "Corkscrew" is a thrill ride Co., a Peninsula firm, for Marriott's developed by Arrow Development Great America in Santa Clara.

another company did wrong.

"Let me give you an example. Where once the braking system was operated manually, it is now operated through a computer and electronically. Our rides operate on the same principle as BART."

"At the Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen in the 1880s the operator would ride the entire ride."

Sheldon quotes Professor Robert Cartmill: "A coaster is something you get on as a human being and get off as a dishrag."

"Just think of those operators in Copenhagen," he adds wryly. "They must have gone home each night as a dishrag."

Sheldon admits to being "a self-confessed thrill-ride addict."

Why do people get on thrill rides?

He has a theory on that, too. "They want a secure ride. They want to be scared half to death. They want it exciting . . . thrilling . . . but they want to know when they get off they won't be dead."

"Our rides operate on the same principle as a baby being bounced into the air by his dad. He feels secure and he giggles and laughs. But let a stranger try to bounce him. Then you will hear those screams of terror."

The public, Sheldon claims, "is now in the midst of the 'Great American roller coaster fever.' Each park is trying to get the highest, fastest, longest ride ever."

Arrow limits the gravity pull of its rides to a maximum of three G's. But this depends on how long riders are exposed to the gravity pull.

"Twenty or 30 seconds would cause you to black out as the blood was pulled from your brain. When you jump off the average size chair you land with a 10-G force," Sheldon explains. "But the effect is instantaneous. If it lasted a second you would black out."

"Coaster hills and camel-backs need a long track to pull out."

The countryside has changed in the past 32 years. The orchards have been ripped away and the fields are covered with electronic and computer firms.

The Santa Clara Valley is no longer known for its fruit. It has become "Silicon Valley."

But Arrow Development Co. is still there.

No longer does it do odd jobs, however.

It is too busy scaring you half to death.

The Regent

By GENNY HOM
Commissioner of Outside Publicity

Before I begin, I would like to say Welcome back to Serramonte, Regents!

Serramonte High School, as well as other high schools in the Jefferson Union High School District, hasn't had a very good start this year.

MOST OF Serramonte's teachers went on strike. Substitutes were hired to fill in for our regular teachers. Students started off by going to their scheduled classes on a minimum-day schedule. Later, this was changed to a full-day schedule.

Many of Serramonte's students became disgusted with the situations presented by the strike. During the first week of school, attendance wasn't normal because many students could not find their own transportation or felt classes weren't worth going to. There were even petitions started by students trying to end the strike.

The first meeting of Serramonte's Executive Board was Sept. 20. Student body officers discussed important issues and elected two other students to serve on the board. The two students selected were Rosie Axiak, sergeant at arms, and Ginger Allip, parliamentarian.

OTHER student body officers are Imogene Mamoe, president; Diana Law, vice-president; Carol Ann Hall, secretary; Shirley Ong, treasurer; Robin Moeller, commissioner of inside publicity; Leslie McNeil, commissioner of elections; June Lara, commissioner of athletics; Genny Hom, commissioner of outside publicity; Daphne Jackson, commissioner of rallies and entertainment; and Curtis Dennison and Marianne Lenci, student advisory council.

Serramonte elected class officers last April. Usually the officers are elected at the beginning of the year, but by electing them earlier, classes have more time to plan their activities and fundraisers.

Senior class officers are Daria Wiggins, president; Flo Matsu, vice president; Chantay Allmond, secretary; and Mary Pult, treasurer.

ELECTED junior class officers this year are Luanda Wesley, president; Regina King, vice president; and Pamela Jackson, secretary.

Class officers for the sophomores are Anne Lewis, president; Cynthia Haynes, vice-president; Roshanne Pierson, secretary; and Chris Korn, treasurer.

Freshman class officers will be elected soon. I hope many freshmen will show their spirit by running for office.

Counseling Project Opens a New Life

By ARVILLE FINACOM

Although she says, "With an active mind, it's shivering to just sit at home and vegetate when there's a whole world out there," Maurine Poppers never really fit that pattern.

Active in PTA at the unit, council and district level, and as a member and chairman of the Millbrae Parks and Recreation Commission, Mrs. Poppers filled her children's growing years with a variety of volunteer activities.

IN FACT, it was one of these volunteer jobs — the peer counseling program she and teacher Elsie Kendall initiated at Millbrae's Taylor Intermediate School — that made her consider re-entering the world of work and study.

Even though she says, "It's scary and risky to venture out of the protective cocoon of marriage and family," Poppers did. She enrolled in Antioch College, an accredited, alternative university with branches throughout the United States and Western Europe.

That was three years ago. Today, Poppers is pursuing a master's degree in psychology. Her goal is licensing as a marriage and family counselor and her two-day-a-week volunteer schedule at Taylor Intermediate is part of her internship program.

POPPERS also serves on the college faculty and admissions committees. As part of the former, she helps set university policy. On the latter, her tasks include admissions interviewing.

Because Antioch College is a "university without walls" it considers the interview process vital. Students must be highly motivated and extremely self-directed. They must know who they are and what they want from life.

Since experience and maturity are keys to such knowing, the average age of students at Antioch is 35. Applicants come from many backgrounds. Some, like Poppers, are initiating a career pursuit for the first time in their lives. Others come from occupations where there are insufficient opportunities for challenge and advancement. A significant number comes from job activities where they feel their personal worth is being diminished. These sensitive souls are seeking new ways to show the contributions they can make are worthwhile.

MOST share the sense of challenge and exhilaration Poppers feels: "To start a whole new career and life at a time when our grandparents were resigned to things as they were is exciting."

Another thing Antioch College students share is a sense of mutual respect. Their varied experiential backgrounds make them instant authorities. "There's a real working together," says Poppers. "We're resources for each other — it's great to be respected for what I know."

Perspective

Antioch College is not oriented exclusively to academics. Its use of community resources fulfills its goal for students of an "on-the-job" experience.

ACCORDING to Poppers, local master's programs include one in environmental science carried out through the Integral Urban House in Berkeley. Another, through San Francisco General Hospital, prepares mental health workers. A degree in urban planning is available and the "at-a-distance" program provides study possibilities for those who live too far away to attend classes and seminars in its San Francisco 9th Street building.

As I mentioned earlier, Poppers' own degree program includes volunteer work at Taylor Intermediate in Millbrae. Here she will talk with seventh and eighth graders referred to her by parents, teachers, the school nurse and other staff members. Students also will be free to refer themselves to her.

Poppers will sit in on Taylor's diagnostic team discussions. The "team" includes school district nurse Betty de Jarnatt, at least one of the school district psychologists, as well as Taylor counselor Wayne Duden and school administrators Mal Blum and Gene Van Duyn. The team's weekly sessions focus on pre-problem and problem behavior as observed in specific students.

Although she has no school-related authority in that she can't move a student from one class to another, Poppers predicts many school-related comments will come from her counselees. "Family issues relate closely to school issues," Poppers says. I almost can hear her add that the young person having problems in the classroom often is working out problems that began at home.

ALL POPPERS' work at Taylor is under the direction of the qualified Millbrae School District psychological services staff.

Poppers thoroughly enjoys her work with young adolescents. "They are capable of a level of caring and maturity often not understood nor expected by adults," she says. She adds, explaining why adolescent behavior usually is characterized as negative, "When we look for the negatives, we find them. It's a self-sustaining circle. There's so much more present in adolescents than we recognize as being there. We have to start looking for those positives."

I'm sure that search for the positives will sustain Mrs. Poppers through her career preparation and on into the many job years ahead of her. She stands as example to those who wonder as they watch their children grow and leave, "What am I going to do next?" That "next" can be a most exciting and fulfilling part of life.

THE DIET CORNER

By ELISE GENDAR

Simplification. That's what makes life easy. There are people who glory in complexing up diets. Me, I believe that the easier the diet rules, the more closely people will keep them.

And one of the simplest rules you can impose upon yourself is not to eat any morsel that you haven't planned for in advance. Requires thought? Right! Bright and early in the morning, or late in the evening, whichever best suits your lifestyle, plan your meals for the next day. This task is not a brain strain, and once you acquire the habit, you'll be surprised how easy this rule is to follow.

Sketch the skeleton outline of your meals for the following day. You've probably shopped for them so that this is planned, if unwritten. Then you add in your allowable snacks — vary them, please. Then aside from some extra raw vegetable nibbles or diet soda, you don't deviate.

When you are offered something not included in your plan, do not accept. When you walk into a situation in your kitchen where there is a mouthful of food left on someone's place, don't pop it into your mouth. It is just not part of your plan for the day. I mean, whoever made a plan for a day's eating that included "one mouthful of cold mashed potato from Jimmy's plate?" Putting it in words puts it in perspective. A little perspective is a big diet assist.

While you are planning, here is a recipe that is common sense rather than nonsense.

CURRY SALAD DRESSING

- 1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon curry powder (or to taste)
- Dash of salt

Shake all ingredients in jar. Delicious on spinach salad with green onions and mushrooms, also small shrimp may be added. Good on tuna too.

Eschew the unplanned and chew the planned. What a sound diet rule! Simple, isn't it? No mystery, of ifs or buts, just plain and direct. While you are dieting you eat only the foods you have carefully chosen for the day ahead. Set your mind at rest. You know what to do. Do it!

If you would like to lose weight the LUSCIOUS WAY, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elise Gendar, The Diet Workshop, 2533 Taraval St., San Francisco 94116 and I'll send you a collection of recipes using a first choice seafood.

Help Wanted

The following agencies have requested volunteer assistance from the Volunteer Bureau/Voluntary Action Center of San Mateo County, with offices in Burlingame, Redwood City and Daly City.

FRIENDLY VISITING SERVICE — Volunteers are needed to visit lonely individuals confined to their homes and in convalescent hospitals on a one-to-one basis. The need is county wide, both men and women are needed to visit and the time can be arranged.

UNICEF — Volunteers are needed from now until Christmas to sell gift items and cards to benefit the needy children of the world.

BAYSHORE CHILDCARE CENTER — Volunteers are needed to provide extra help as well as to share their own experiences to enhance the program which serves infants, toddlers and pre-schoolers in Daly City. Help is needed daily on a part-time basis. Volunteers should enjoy and be interested in children.

NORTH COUNTY MENTAL HEALTH — Concerned citizens are needed who would like to take part in promoting better mental health in North County.

For further information about these and other volunteer opportunities contact the Volunteer Bureau at the main office in Burlingame at 342-0801. Interviews will be made in Daly City by appointment through the North County number, 992-0567. Hours at the main office are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. A project of the Assistance League of San Mateo County, the Bureau shares in the United Way of the Bay Area and is funded, in part, by the County of San Mateo.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks. Bored appetites breed bad breakfast habits. So use a little creativity to wake up the morning menu, and start the day with a fresh look at things. Put the "break" back in breakfast with a French Jelly Grill.

This recipe, developed by Kraft Kitchens, combines three long-time morning favorites into a unique breakfast sandwich. And, as any discerning taste bud can tell, it's a welcome change from the same old thing.

For the ham-and-egg lover, the sandwich includes boiled ham. This can be the lunch meat variety or sliced leftovers from a fresh or smoked ham roast. Toast and jelly fans will recognize their choice of grape jelly or strawberry preserves — adding a naturally sweet and tangy fruit flavor. Melted process cheese spread blends the ingredients inside, and the bread's egg mixture coating gives the sandwich a golden brown French toast finish.

It doesn't take much effort to give routine breakfasts a new look and taste. And with a little extra attention, breakfast might be just the way to say "good morning."

FRENCH JELLY GRILL

- 12 white bread slices
  - Grape jelly or strawberry preserves
  - Pasteurized process cheese spread
  - 6 slices boiled ham
  - 2 eggs, slightly beaten
  - 1/4 cup milk
  - 1 to 2 tablespoons margarine
- For each sandwich, cover slice of bread with jelly, process cheese spread, ham and second slice of bread. Dip each sandwich in combined eggs and milk, turning to coat both sides. Melt margarine on griddle or in skillet; grill sandwiches on both sides until golden brown.

Samuel Chandler

"A schoolmaster should have an atmosphere of awe and walk wonderfully, as if he was amazed at being himself." — Walter Bagehot

Every morning when I take my teenager to school I am embarrassed by the scene presented by roughly garbed, hirsute teachers walking in a picket line. I am concerned with what my child must be thinking when he realizes that these creatures in their shapeless dungarees and their mouths full of words like scab and traitor have been chosen to bring culture and wisdom to him and the rest of tomorrow's men and women.

I AM incensed to realize that these highly educated men and women, these teachers who have received the best training that America can offer, can descend below the levels of the unschooled wobblers of 50 or 70 years ago.

I am incensed to think that America, with all her talk of 20th century enlightenment, can't devise ways to settle disputes beyond the tactics that were developed by Neanderthal man.

I am incensed because the teachers and trustees seem to be so selfish that they place their own concerns above their sacred obligation to train children. In reality the students who will get low scores on the ACT test and those who won't learn the skills necessary to compete for jobs next spring are the real victims of teacher strikes, but their needs seem to be secondary to the question of whose pocket will hold certain dollars.

THE ENTIRE picture recalls a scene in Ginott's "Teacher and Child," (New York, Macmillan, $5.95) wherein a group of teachers discuss their frustration. The statements of disenchantment and disappointment they make leads one of them to say, "Education is a lost cause. There are solutions but they'll never be used. Effective remedies require a fundamental change in the system. The bosses will never allow it."

In response, a less idealistic teacher chides his colleague and says, "The whole system of education is built on distrust. The teacher distrusts the students. The principal distrusts the teachers. The superintendent distrusts the principals, and the school board is wary of the superintendent. Each authority sets up rules and regulations that create a prison atmosphere and an implicit charge that everyone in the system is dishonest or incompetent or irresponsible."

In frustration a young teacher cries, "Is there no hope at all for education?"

"There ain't," another one answers; "Get it through your head, girl, and you'll live longer."

Then an older teacher says, "If there is no hope for education, there is no hope for humanity."

SUCH DRAMAS illustrate why we have teacher strikes. The truth of the picture is found in Ginott's statement, "The preceding discussion is highly uniform; the stress does not change, and the mood is monotonous. The monotony only emphasizes the main motif: teacher dissatisfaction, disappointment and despair of young teachers." Their pain comes from the nature of life in school. They weep, they quote Virgil, "because of the tears of things." They go on strike!

Ginott's book is one of hundreds that are calling for a change in education in America. Maybe it's time to close down the picket lines and to cease endless talk at negotiations and start from square one to put first things first in education.

It seems that American education is like a man found in Ginott's book. Being in dire trouble he went to his rabbi for help. The rabbi listened and advised, "Trust in God. He will provide for you." "Yes," answered the man, "but tell me, what do I do until then?"

'FRIENDS' SPEAKER

Samuel Chandler previews his discussion of "Irving Stone, Master of the Biographical Novel" which will be given for The Friends of the Daly City Library and their guests Thursday at 10 a.m. in the community room of the Serramonte Library, with Eileen Kenny, center, "The Friends' hospitality chairman and Lorraine Sandefur, left, book review chairman. Stone, who was born in San Francisco, has authored best-sellers, among which are "The Agony of the Ecstasy," "The Immortal Wife," and "Men to Match My Mountains."

Sphere Study OKd

The San Mateo County Local Agency Formation Commission Wednesday authorized a sphere of influence study on the northeast ridge of San Bruno Mountain and adjacent lands of the Crocker Industrial Park.

The study will recommend which municipality — Daly City or Brisbane — should have jurisdiction over future development on the lands. A request for annexation of the property likely will follow the study.

B. Sherman Coffman, executive director of LAFCO, told the commission that the study, requested by Visitation Associates, owners of the property, would begin next month.

Ronald Grudzinski, project manager for the landowner, said the study was necessary before his company could submit specific development plans and a tentative subdivision map for the land.

In 1976 the county Board of Supervisors approved a general plan for the northeast ridge that allowed 65 acres for residential development; 14 acres for retail and commercial and 11 acres for industrial uses.

The remainder of the land was designated for public and quasi-public uses, including schools, parks and open space.

It is expected that both Daly City and Brisbane will fight for control of the property in order to collect the tax revenue once the land is developed. The land is contiguous to Brisbane, but Daly City has provided services to the industrial park for several years.

The Guadalupe Municipal Improvement District contracts with Daly City for police and fire services in the industrial park.

Car Hits 2 Homes

A South San Francisco woman suffered minor injuries and Daly City police are investigating the circumstances of a freak traffic mishap in which her car plowed into two homes on Gellert Boulevard early Saturday morning.

Police said Judy Sanarazes, 23, was driving north on Gellert when she apparently lost control of her car. The car sheared off a tree at the curb, ran into the garage at the Miguel Molina home at 962 Gellert, went over the top of a car in the garage, through a wall on the north side of the house and crashed into the wall of the Jack Ho home next door at 958 Gellert, officers said.

The car came to rest with the rear end on top of the car at 962 Gellert, the middle between the two homes and the front in the garage at 958 Gellert, police said.

The driver was treated at Mary's Help Hospital for only minor bruises, but it took tow truck personnel two hours to get her badly-damaged car out of the two houses, officers went on.

Younger Tells How He Would Make Cuts

A plan to cut back spending in California's state budget by $1 billion was outlined by Republican gubernatorial candidate Evelle Younger in San Mateo Friday.

The state attorney general blasted Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. for the well-publicized $6 billion surplus that accumulated during his administration and said his opponent in the Nov. 7 election has shown a "failure of leadership and a failure to perform."

The candidate's speech to some 150 persons at the beginning of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce luncheon was brief. He said he had a commitment to the governor of Baja California in Los Angeles a few hours later.

Younger first attempted to unveil his plan a week ago at a Sacramento news conference but his campaign effort was overshadowed by an unrelated issue. Questions at the conference in Sacramento focused on a claim that Younger's office blocked a grand jury investigation in Madera County.

But Friday he found a business-oriented audience willing to listen to what he called "pocketbook issues."

Overall, he said, he would aim to cut the state budget by a total of 10 percent in 1979-80. He would begin his slashing by attacking many of the state's 450 boards, commissions and regulatory agencies.

"What California needs today is less government and more government efficiency," Younger said.

One of his principal targets, he said, would be the state Energy Commission which, he claimed, has "a miserable track record." During its four-year existence, it hasn't authorized or approved construction of a single power plant, Younger declared.

He also would eliminate the Office of Appropriate Technology. He listed some of the agency's projects as a solar beeswax melter, a solar assisted coffee drying platform and a solar powered cow washer.

"That's where some of your tax money has been going," he said.

As governor, he said, he would impose so-called "sunset" laws in which all government agencies and commissions would be forced annually to justify their continued existence.

Welfare costs, he added, are "an outrage." He said he would work toward slashing the $50 million administrative costs of the welfare system.

Younger criticized what he said is a $600 million "special fund" in the state budget, one that should be eliminated or reduced. He said the fund set aside by the state Legislature is a "cookie jar" with no specific purpose.

The candidate said it includes, for example, a $50 million reserve for the Department of Motor Vehicles to fall back on if it can't get what it wants from the Legislature someday.

The biggest cookie jar of all, he said, is Item 441 of the state budget called "capital outlay future reserves," amounting to $142,620,843 for construction of unspecified state buildings after the year 1979.

He also said he would eliminate the strings attached to categorical aid programs for public schools and eliminate funding for community college summer school programs.

$500,000 'Lost' In Paper Shuffle

By DUANE SANDUL

As much as $500,000 per year is escaping public coffers in San Mateo County because the Municipal Courts are unable to keep tabs on thousands of traffic offenders.

As many as 45,000 people who receive moving violation tickets but fail to appear are lost or forgotten in the bureaucratic paperwork shuffle each year.

The thousands of dollars they would be ordered to pay go uncollected.

But Russell M. Woods, administrator for the Southern Municipal Court District, wants to change all of that.

The presiding judges have devised a plan to develop a computerized automated Municipal Court traffic system.

To get it started, they are asking the Criminal Justice Council of San Mateo County to approve a $55,000 grant, $50,000 of which would be federal money. Action will be taken today when the 28-member council meets at San Carlos City Hall. A meeting Wednesday was postponed because of a lack of a quorum.

Computerization would also allow the courts to free as many as six clerks to tasks other than traffic-related bookwork.

Woods, in a report, called the clerk-manual system of keeping tabs on 147,500 moving citation cases per year in San Mateo County totally "inefficient."

The problem is one in keeping accurate information on motorists who fail to appear for their initial court appearance.

"The Southern District (which encompasses six courts in a jurisdiction from Millbrae to Menlo Park) is now experiencing a 30 percent failure-to-appear rate on moving violations," Woods reported.

Delinquent citations which are identified require the issuance of a warrant, a costly procedure.

Woods described in his report to the Criminal Justice Council how a computerized system could eliminate all backlogs in the clerical processing of traffic citations, increase the revenue collected by the courts by $500,000, and free six employees from the traffic division to other divisions.

A computerized system would allow the courts to automatically mail warnings to offenders who fail to appear. The warning would threaten stripping of their licenses until the matter is cleared.

Such a procedure in other counties has proven successful, according to Woods.

The computerization could also help keep status on the county's 243,000 annual illegal parking citations.

The judges are asking to launch the system in the Southern District first before extending it to the Northern District, which encompasses from San Bruno to Daly City.

"The courts maintain sufficient funds to pay for the operation costs of the system," Woods said. The grant is to develop it.

Le Pacini

(LAST OF THREE PARTS)

Talking to Willie Kamm is like talking to a walking piece of baseball history. Stories of the greats roll off his tongue as you or I might talk of our mailman or corner grocer. But for all of his nonchalance about the Hall of Famers he's played with and against, he's still in awe of the Yankees in general and Babe Ruth in particular. Would he say that Ruth is the greatest player he ever saw?

"Well, if I was starting a team, he'd be the first guy I'd pick. For the homeruns AND his drawing power."

WERE THE Yankees really as feared in contemporary times as legend now describes them?

"I'd say so. They were so superior. It was very agonizing to play against them. In Chicago the visiting team would have to come through our dugout to get to the field. We'd be sitting there, having already been on the field for two-three hours, and they would come through, and half of them hadn't been to bed all night. You could smell the booze on them as they passed you. The'd be saying, 'Oh, Christ, that sun is bright.' 'Oh, my God, I'll never make it today!' Here we were, goody-goody boys; curfew, out in uniform at 10 a.m., practicing, practicing, and they'd blow us out."

Sports And Recreation

"In 1927 we had this young shortstop, Ray Flaskamper, just up from the minors, and we were playing the Yankees. They get up and hit the ball all over the lot. Every time we get them out, it's a line drive. We're striking out, hitting pop flies, hitting them back at the pitcher. So after about six innings, Bob Meusel hits a real vicious thing that hits Flaskamper on the leg and it looked like it had broken it. Everybody runs out to see how Flash is, and he's limping around, and says to me, 'Say, Willie, are those guys hitting the same ball we are?'"

"THE THING about a team like the Yankees were is that it can make any player look better. Infielders, for instance. You play for the Yankees, make two errors and let three runs in, but they score nine and everybody forgets your errors. You make the same two errors with the White Sox and you lose, 3-0. The next day you read headlines, 'Kamm's Errors Cost Sox.'"

As mentioned earlier Kamm was very friendly with Ty Cobb, even though he admits that "Cobb was the most disliked person I ever met in baseball."

Kamm and Cobb met when Kamm was with the Seals. Cobb, a friend of George Putnam, one of the owners, was managing the San Francisco winter league version of the Seals. It was at that time that Kamm also met Rogers Hornsby, who was managing the winter league Missions, for whom Kamm was playing. Hornsby, also a very disliked man in the game, took to Kamm, as Cobb had; probably because Willie was a serious student of the game. In fact, while Kamm was with the Seals, both wrote him letters giving him tips on hitting. Hornsby's letter was 18-20 pages with sketched diagrams. Kamm studied and practiced their techniques (none of which he could ever adopt to himself), and then after a couple of years threw the letters away.

"THAT'S ONE of my biggest regrets in life, throwing those away. Can you imagine what priceless documents they would be today?"

Kamm says Cobb was disliked mainly because he was "always strictly out for Cobb. If the show wasn't on him, he wouldn't play. If, for example, there was a fire outside the stadium while Cobb was taking batting practice, he wouldn't hit, because people in the stands would be watching the fire instead of him."

Kamm says that it was really true that when Cobb was on the field, he had no friends. One day Cobb was out by 10 feet trying to stretch a double into a triple. Kamm was waiting for him.

"Ty didn't just slide spikes high. As he came in to you, he would thrash his legs, literally try to RIP you. He did that to me and tore both socks off my legs."

KAMM WENT into the dugout to get taped up and change his socks and then counted 13 cuts on his legs!

"But that wasn't the end of it. Next time Cobb's up, Red Faber throws three straight at his head. With every pitch Ty gets up and walks further out to the mound. Faber ignores him. Then, on the 3-0 pitch, Ty bunts it down the first base line, trying to draw Red in to field it, but Red stays on the mound. Our first baseman, Bud Clancy, fields it, but our second baseman isn't covering, either, and there's no way Clancy is going to get near the bag, because here comes Cobb and you could all but see the smoke coming out of his ears. He's looking to cut somebody, anybody, but about three-quarters to the bag, he looks up and nobody's there, and he slows down and begins looking around wildly for somebody to cut down. 'Hey,' he says, 'what the hell's going on around here?'"

Jimmy O'Connell, who was involved in one of organized baseball's biggest "fix" scandals, was a San Francisco buddy and Seals roommate of Kamm's, and they broke into the majors together. But in 1924 Judge Keneaw Mountain Landis banned the promising young Giants outfielder for life when O'Connell admitted offering Philadelphia shortstop Heinie Sand $500 to "take it easy" on the Giants in the late-season pennant chase, which the Giants eventually won.

"THE O'CONNELL thing is one of my few sad memories in baseball," says Kamm. "I definitely feel that Jimmy didn't conspire to throw games. He was an easy-going kid. You could see how somebody could talk him into something, use him."

"I understand that when Landis called him into his office, Landis said to him, 'You didn't do this, did you Jimmy?' And Jim said, 'Yes, I did,' and Landis said, 'No, you didn't, did you?' And Jim insisted that he did. Landis had no choice but to ban him. Jim made the mistake of going in there by himself, with no representation. He hadn't been coached on what to say to Landis."

"The guy I feel sorry for is Sand (who informed his manager of O'Connell's proposal), because he had it on his mind that he ruined a career. I would have done the same thing, as well as I knew Jim, to protect myself. Otherwise, I make an error or something, and somebody's pointing their finger at me."

KAMM ARRIVED in Chicago not long after the Black Sox scandal, was there any pressure on the White Sox because of that?

"No, aside from the fact that to this day there are people who think I was involved, even though I was a rookie in the Coast League at the time. My only pressure was that I was from California. When I first joined the club in spring training I happened to get in the same cab going to the park as our manager, Kid Gleason, and he says, 'You're from San Francisco? There hasn't been one guy from California that was ever worth a s—. The only guy from out there who was ever half-way decent was that Harry Helman.' Boy, was Gleason ever wrong."

South S.F. Upsets St. Ignatius

"I'm firmly convinced that to win consistently you've got to be able to move the football on the ground. And then if you can throw the ball successfully a little bit, then you're OK."

That is what South San Francisco High Coach Ray DeJong had to say following the Warriors' stunning 26-14 upset victory over previously unbeaten St. Ignatius Friday in San Francisco.

DeJong's coaching philosophy hasn't changed much in more than 25 years at the South City helm, and it didn't fail him against the highly touted Wildcats.

By contrast, pass-happy St. Ignatius mentor John Allen must be scratching his head a bit after the erratic play of his wide-open run-and-shoot offense.

SI, for years a grind-it-out type of club, never seriously tried to establish a running game. That was fine with South City. After all, the Warriors had given up 222 yards on the ground to Serra last week in a 27-7 loss.

South City, however, was able to run the ball effectively (as it had to some extent against Serra) and found the end zone with a bit more regularity than it had against the Padres.

The Warriors took advantage of SI's sputtering offense in the first quarter as they enjoyed good field position throughout. SSF scored the first two times it touched the ball to take a 13-0 lead.

A short SI punt preceded SSF's first scoring drive. The Warriors went 36 yards in eight plays with Dwight Atienza crashing over from the two-yard line for 7-0.

Bill Vaden set up SSF's second score by picking off a Ken Cruz pass on the SI 39-yard line. A wobbly pass completion from QB Tom Esqueda to Vaden moved SSF close to the goal line before Esqueda capped the drive by drilling a six-yard TD strike over the middle to split end Ron Hawkins.

Cruz was off target during the first half, and SI was also plagued by penalties, poor execution and a heads-up Warrior secondary. But it looked like SI might claw its way back into the game in the third quarter after recovering a couple of fumbles.

The first Warrior bobble set up the Wildcats on the SSF 30-yard line. It took SI just three plays to reach paydirt as fullback Andy Clark went over from the two with 6:47 left in the period.

Then, a sensational hit on the ensuing kickoff by SI's "suicide squad" forced a fumble and really brought the dormant 'Cats to life.

However, a penalty and a sack pushed Allen's squad back a bit and SSF was equal to the challenge of SI's aerial threat.

South City finally broke the game open late in the quarter after Mark Rowlands recovered another Wildcat fumble on the SI 31. The key play in this drive was an inside reverse for a first down on fourth-and-five by SSF's Tim Wright.

The reverse moved the ball to the 11, and then halfback Carl Montgomery covered the distance in two carries to put the Warriors ahead 20-6.

A fumble on SI's first possession of the final stanza sealed the Wildcats' fate. SSF's George Nualiki pounced on the loose ball, and two plays later Jerry Pirillo pounded over from the one to put the game out of reach.

"We defended the pass well," said DeJong. "Our entire secondary did a good job on defense, and our corners put a lot of pressure on him (Cruz) — making him hear footsteps."

Cruz, connecting at a 56 percent clip before Friday completed a scant 10 of 34 attempts for 145 yards, with two interceptions.

"The biggest thing," continued DeJong, "was we had a little control on offense. That's the only thing we didn't have last week. We were too damn fancy last week against Serra. We tried to fool people instead of trying to establish ball control."

Control the ball South City did, outgaining SI 224 to 162. SSF rolled up 174 yards on the ground to a minuscule 17 for the Wildcats. Montgomery led all rushers with 90 yards on 16 carries.

SI is still without the services of punishing fullback Steve Burns (broken hand). His presence could mean a drastic improvement in the Wildcat running game (assuming, of course, that SI doesn't use him solely as a pass receiver).

Capuchino, Camino Tie

Trailing 14-6 midway through the final quarter, El Camino High's football team drove 46 yards in 13 plays for a touchdown and two-point conversion as the Colts salvaged a 14-14 non-league tie with visiting Capuchino at Clifford Field Friday night.

With the score knotted at 6-6, Cap took its second lead of the night when Mustang fullback Dave McLaughlin scored standing up on a three-yard blast on the second-to-last play of the third period. Running back Rod Brown then took a pitchout from quarterback Jeff Monteroso and cut across the goal line on Cap's two-point conversion attempt.

But a costly penalty whistled against Cap gave El Camino possession of the ball at the Mustang 46 with 5:56 remaining. With quarterback Roger Ruzek carrying three times for 15 yards and connecting with Bill Agiero on a 16-yard pass play, the Colts marched goalward.

Running back Barradas took a pitch from Ruzek and scored on a two-yard run to make it 14-12 with 1:10 left. El Camino tied it when Ruzek, scrambling toward his left, found running back Gary Ryan in the rear left side of the end zone for a successful two-point pass.

Cap had stunned the Colts on the final play of the first half when Monteroso rolled to his right, evaded some defensive pressure, turned and fired a beautiful spiral to wide receiver Jay Boragno. Boragno, racing down the left sideline, streaked past a surprised Colt defender and made the catch, giving the Mustangs a 6-0 lead at half-time.

Apparently undaunted, the Colts scored on their initial possession of the second half. Ruzek hit Ron Doane with a pass near the right sideline; Doane sidestepped a defender at the 10 and raced into the end zone to make it 6-6.

Jeff Falls In Tough 2nd Half

SANTA CRUZ — Turnovers negated superb rushing efforts by Richard Rodgers and Doug Cheatum as Jefferson High dropped a 23-7 non-league football decision to Santa Cruz Friday.

The Indians totaled 201 yards rushing, but did not gain a yard passing, and committed two turnovers which led directly to Santa Cruz scores.

After Santa Cruz opened a 7-0 lead, Rodgers knotted the score on a one-yard plunge. The senior running back netted 98 yards on 24 carries in the game.

Santa Cruz broke the game open in the third quarter, scoring on a 20-yard field goal and a one-yard burst.

Cheatum complemented Rodgers in the backfield, carrying the ball 13 times and gaining 62 yards.

Jeff is now 1-1.

ON THE RIVIERA

As trees grow in Brooklyn, so do bunkers live on the greens at the Riviera Country Club in Los Angeles, as seen here on the 174-yard par three 6th hole.

A Tough and Famous Old Course

Golf course explorer

By Hal Gevertz

protects miscalculated shots on this first-rate hole.

THIS IS followed by the showcase one-shot 174-yard 6th, where sandtraps proliferate. Along with a tactical towering eucalyptus cutting off air space to the green on the left and two sizeable bunkers in the middle of the fairway, I found a small sand island implanted in the center of the green. Only the best-positioned shot will make it on this fun par three.

The par four 425-yard 13th is an application in lofty tree golfing. The left side of the fairway has a protruding grove of eucalyptus, making it dogleg left country and there is heavy timber on the right, almost to the green. This is one hole where under-the-tree, long iron play will at times fend off the sound of wood and a bad score.

There are about 60 bunkers, many of which are enormous and fearful in design. The 419-yard par four 9th has seven of them spread on the ground from the center of the fairway to the manicured fringes of its high-rise sloping green.

ANOTHER commanding exhibit of sand play is the 319-yard par four 10th. A thin strip of horizontal putting green front is surrounded by sand troughs with every little playing room in between. I noticed a number of large pebbles in many bunkers and suggest due caution in where you place the sand wedge.

The terraced and irregular greens of Riviera provide putting surfaces from 4,500 to 9,000 square feet. They are associated with a soft but firm base to accept properly-controlled approach shots. They were surprisingly fast as coarse textured greens go and a putt easily can be missed from short distances because of their unseen departures.

With 606 members enjoying the facilities of this residential Pacific Palisades golf course, it is only natural that fine practicing facilities and tennis courts were built to keep their members busy while waiting to play on their normal bustling golfing days.

AFTER GOLF, I checked into the clubhouse for some refreshments and found more crystal chandeliers, stained glass and potted plants than I saw in the restored and historic city of Savannah, Ga. on my last visit.

SSF Fortune Teller, Husband Go to Prison

A South San Francisco fortune teller and her husband were sentenced to federal prison Wednesday in an insurance fraud scheme that allegedly bilked at least 10 national insurance companies out of some $17,800 over a three-year period.

Mary Lee, 33, operator of Madame Carla's Fortune

Telling Salon, 780 El Camino Real, South San Francisco, was sentenced to two years, with 18 months suspended, but then sentenced to two more years after that.

Her husband, Boyd Joseph John, 34, was sentenced to two years in prison and two years of probation after that.

Federal District Court Judge Cecil F. Poole denied pleas for leniency, commenting that this was well thought out scheme requiring considerable planning and was "just plain thievery."

The defendants were given a stay of execution on the sentence until Oct. 2.

when they are to surrender to the U.S. marshal in San Francisco for transportation to a federal penitentiary yet to be designated.

The case was prosecuted in federal court by Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Berne as a consumer-oriented mail fraud.

The couple was arrested

June 20 after months of investigation by South San Francisco Police Permits and Licensing Officer Paul Ziener and detectives Pat Sullivan and Miff Singleton and U.S. Postal Inspector Russ Russell. They were charged with mail fraud.

The complaint charged that between May 1975 and May 1978, the couple and others collaborated to apply for homeowner-tenant insurance policies under fictitious names and then submitted claims for losses to each insurance company for the loss of golf clubs and miscellaneous items, including women's clothing, from a parked automobile.

At least 16 separate insurance policies are known to have been issued to John, involving successful claims against at least 10 insurance companies.

More insurance companies and losses may be uncovered if more insurance carriers come forward, Russell added.

The losses from the auto were reported to police all over the Bay Area, with six of the 16 documented cases occurring in San Mateo County, including one in Millbrae, three in San Mateo and two in Redwood City.

The perpetrators were tripped up when they submitted two claims under the same fictitious names of John Silva and Lee Silva to the same insurance company, State Farm Insurance, Nov. 13, 1976 and April 13, 1977, for loss of two sets of golf clubs from their car, one alleged incident occurring in San Mateo and the other in San Francisco, Russell said.

Investigators from the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute looked into the claims and in the spring of this year turned the case over to the postal inspectors.

The common component of all the claims found so far is that all were for items claimed stolen from the same two cars registered to Lee and John at the same three addresses, 780 El Camino Real, South San Francisco, and 22 N. San Mateo Drive and 400 E. Hillsdale Blvd., both San Mateo, Russell said.

Impasse Declared In Laguna Salada

A crowd of about 100 parents and teachers listened with interest as the Laguna Salada Union School District's bargaining team reported Thursday night on the progress of negotiations with employees.

Lucille Foster, who heads personnel and the district's team, said the classified employees are on the verge of settling a new contract with the district.

But she reported that teachers and the administration have jointly declared an impasse - a formal roadblock in negotiations.

The two sides are waiting to hear when a mediator from the state Public Employee Relations Board will be sent to try to settle their differences.

Anne Shea, president of the Laguna Salada Educational Association, which represents the teachers, asked why the district had served teachers with notices of possible dismissal. The teachers have, in fact, been sent reminders that they will be subject to punitive measures if they violate any state statutes or board policies.

Displeased with the stalemate in negotiations, the teachers began a work slowdown this week. While they are continuing to teach as usual, they have refused to conduct any extra-curricular activities or attend back-to-school nights scheduled by the district.

The board of trustees did not take action on the controversial topic of crossing guards, pointing out that it is the city of Pacifica's job to provide safety personnel to assist students walking to school.

Citing funding shortages caused by Proposition 13, the City Council has refused to pay the entire cost of the guards as it has in the past. Instead, the council offered to pay $7,000 if the district agreed to pay $7,000.

Superintendent James Brien said it was unfortunate that the council had decided to play a "poker game" with children's safety.

Jury Convicts Man in Slaying

A jury late Thursday convicted Giacomo Messina of voluntary manslaughter in the gunshot slaying of James Katsaras in Burlingame last April.

An insanity phase to the trial began today before the same jury and Superior Court Judge Robert E. Carey in Redwood City.

Katsaras, 36, was the owner of Diamond Jim's Cabaret Showboat.

Messina, 37, testified that he lost his head because he believed that Katsaras duped him out of $29,000 in a business venture involving the restaurant.

Defense attorney Gordon L. Rockhill and Prosecutor Thomas A. Blake each intended to put on psychiatric testimony today.

Legal insanity is when jurors agree that a defendant did not know right from wrong, and that he did not grasp the quality of his actions.

If Messina is found to have been insane, he would face an undetermined length of time in a state hospital until officials deemed his sanity had been restored.

Prop. 13 Aftermath Private Firms Balk At Pledging Funds

By RICK SULLIVAN

San Mateo County businesses are apparently in no great hurry to pledge back to local government a portion of expected post-Proposition 13 property tax savings to help restore public services.

A special fund, created last month to collect private donations specifically to shore up a myriad of library and recreation programs that fell victim to the Jarvis-Gann axe, is stagnating.

In fact, to date the fund has received but a single donation.

Thomas Sewell, president of the Lithotype Co., of South San Francisco wrote a check on Aug. 29 for $2,000.

He is the husband of Isabelle Sewell, a outspoken local advocate of recreation and open space and a member of the Sierra Club, Committee for Green Foothills and the Committee to Save San Bruno Mountain. She also is a part owner of the Lithotype Co.

"I had my mind made up to share a part of the (property tax) savings so I just thought I'd write a check and get it over with," commented Sewell.

"I think businesses should share some of their savings the same as apartment owners should pass their savings on to their tenants."

That opinion, so far, is a lonely one, shared only publicly by County Supervisor John Ward and the executive committee of the Governmental Research Council, a government watchdog group comprised of this county's leading businessmen.

On Aug. 1 the supervisor and officials of the GRC announced with some fanfare the formation of a private fund to which businessmen and other property owners could donate to help pay for programs cut last July as cost saving measures.

The fund, administered by the non-profit San Mateo Foundation, allows businesses to pass on some of their tax savings to bolster the sagging budgets of the library and parks and recreation department and even the Peninsula Humane Society.

During three rounds of post-Jarvis budget review sessions, the Board of Supervisors closed three library branches and reduced the hours at the remaining 11 branches; closed several small park units; and cut in half its subvention to the humane society, which contracts with the county for animal control.

"This special fund," Ward has noted, "will allow the private sector to help at a time when we (government) can no longer provide the type of funding the people are used to."

Larry Armstrong, executive director of the GRC, had announced that the GRC executive committee supported the fund and he pledged to solicit donations from businesses.

But Armstrong found that support of a concept and its immediate implementation are vastly different.

His limited solicitation efforts in early August received an almost unanimous response. Entrepreneurs, including high ranking officials of member GRC businesses, told him they would consider donating only after calculating their net Proposition 13 tax savings.

William Somerville, executive director of the San Mateo Foundation, also has solicited donations but has been given a similar reply.

"Most businessmen are taking a wait and see attitude," said Somerville. "They are not yet sure what they will do with the tax savings and some businessmen are not yet convinced of the validity of the fund."

"People have their own time schedules. I think we just have to be patient and the contributions will come," he added.

Somerville noted that he has received some calls from angry property owners berating founders of the fund for trying to use private money to "circumvent" the spirit of Prop. 13.

Armstrong said that for the past six weeks "nobody has really known what kind of savings would be realized by Prop. 13 or whether the legislature would come up with some new financing scheme."

He recounted that outrage rippled through the business community last month when Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy suggested that property taxes on owner-occupied property be dropped, shifting the tax burden to the business sector.

"I think businesses are just now getting a sense of the (financial) impact of Prop. 13," said Armstrong. "We (the GRC) want to wait until the tax bills are received and digested (before soliciting again)."

Reassessment notices were sent to all property owners last week. Tax bills are scheduled to be mailed in mid-October.

Armstrong said the GRC is planning to send letters to all county businesses, probably in late October, asking that they return some of the tax savings to pay for public offerings.

Charges Dismissed

A judge Wednesday formally dismissed murder charges against Darleen Jo Marszalek, the 31-year-old South San Francisco stripper who killed her common-law husband last May after he attacked her.

Superior Court Judge Thomas M. Jenkins dismissed the case "in the interest of justice" at the request of the district attorney's office.

Killed was Kurt Maxie Wilson, 34.

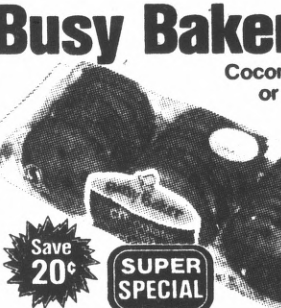

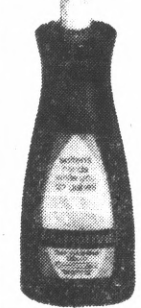

Defense lawyer Parker Kelly said that Mrs. Marszalek shot Wilson in self-defense.

SF Airport Measuring Devices OK'd

Noise measuring equipment around San Francisco International Airport is "considerably more extensive and scientifically refined than that required by state noise standards," according to the California Division of Aeronautics.

That assessment of the local noise monitoring system — which has been challenged by citizen groups as inadequate — came in reply to Airport Director Richard Heath's request for clarification of state noise law regulations.

The opinion was signed by Richard Dyer on behalf of E.J. McKenney, chief of the division of aeronautics.

Finch Eggs Never Hatch

By D.R. BARNETT, DVM

Question: We have a pair of finches and have had them for more than three years and in that time the female has laid over 50 eggs. Not one has ever hatched. We have a large cage and a nest that they are in and out of all the time. I never intended to breed them and if we take the nest out she lays the eggs on the floor of the cage. Can you tell me why they don't hatch?

N.S.

Answer: Many things can influence reproductive activity in birds — periods of light and dark, size of cage and nest area, number and type of birds present and nutrition. Both birds must be fertile (and of the opposite sex) and the eggs must be properly incubated. I am unable to locate specific information on reproductive activity in finches. A pet shop handling birds or a finch breeder might give you more specific information on your problem.

Question: I know that dogs twitch and jerk while dreaming, but I am concerned about my large terrier, who seems to have a rhythmic trembling of her back legs while asleep. Is this because she is a high-strung dog, or could it be muscle weakness coming on? She doesn't have a lot of exercise, except up and down the stairs several times a day and some running in spurts in the yard plus a long romp on the beach once a week.

T.D.

Answer: Many things can cause muscle twitches in animals when they sleep. I would recommend having your veterinarian examine the dog. If the dog checks out normally, then you can most likely assume the cause of the twitching is fairly innocuous.

Question: When a dog's eyelids turn in and the hair rubs on the eyeball, can they be fixed? Could a dog live on a vegetable diet?

B.K.

Answer: Turning in of the eyelids — called entropion — can usually be corrected by surgically removing a small amount of the external skin from the eyelid. This is usually an hereditary problem so an affected animal should not be used for breeding. Dogs can survive on a carefully balanced vegetable diet, but if the diet is not exactly right they can suffer from malnutrition. Dogs are carnivores so an all-vegetable diet is not normal for them. The best diet for most dogs (unless they have specific health problems) is a commercial mixture of meat and vegetables, i.e. dry, canned or semi-moist dog food.

Hide and Seek in Dark

By RICHARD C. MOON

Every once in a while the toy and game industry comes out with a product that is truly unique; something a little different or slightly more challenging than the usual product.

Parker Brothers' NERF toys are a classic example. What started with a simple ball of soft, safe foam has grown into a line of toys that is known to virtually every American child — and his parents.

One of the latest in a long line of innovative, high quality games from Parker

The Gamesman

Brothers is BLACK BOX, and this game may very well be one of the best strategy games to come our way for a long time.

BLACK BOX is a powerful logic and deduction game designed for ages 10 to adult. It may be played by two people, or solitaire. When you open the black box you will find five balls, 48 markers, one pattern score card and a crayon. Inside the box is the playing surface containing a grid of 64 squares.

This is a game of hide and seek. One player hides something, the other player looks for it. The hiding is done on the pattern card and the seeking is done in the box.

The rules are simple. Without showing his opponent the hider marks four or five squares on the pattern card. The marks may be made on any of the 64 squares. The task of the seeker is to find the hidden location of these marks inside the box in as few tries as possible.

FINDING the hidden locations is where the fun and the challenge come in. Parker Brothers likens the seeker to a detective looking for clues. In this case the detective's tool is an imaginary ray.

By sending rays into the box, the seeker gains clues about the hidden locations. Rays are entered by announcing a number from one to 32; these are the numbers of the squares that form the edge of the box.

Once it enters the box, the ray can do one of three things: stay in the box; exit exactly where it entered; or exit somewhere else. The hider observes the ray's movement with the pattern card and tells you which of the three possibilities took place.

Once the seeker finds all the hidden locations, players switch roles. The winner is the seeker finding the hidden locations in the fewest attempts.

FOR THOSE who enjoy games of solitaire, Black Box comes with a book containing 80 different solitaire games that vary in degree of difficulty. If you are looking for a game that is both challenging and different, Black Box may prove to be just the game for you!

Airport Bonds Sold

Sale of $90 million worth of bonds to finance completion of improvements at San Francisco International Airport — approved last November by city voters — was authorized last Tuesday by the San Francisco Airport Commission.

In doing so, the commission overruled complaints by a citizens group and a state agency.

The bonds are to be repaid entirely from airport income, at an interest cost of $136 million over the next 34 years.

Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith was the successful bidder, agreeing to supply the $90 million at an average interest rate of 6.3 percent.

First Boston Corporation & Associates was the losing bidder with an offer to supply the money at 6.4 percent average interest.

The bonds will be offered for sale in $5,000 increments with differing dates of maturity.

On Monday the federal Securities and Exchange Commission received complaints from an attorney from the California Air Resources Board and a complaint from San Francisco Tomorrow, that the bond sale was not going as advertised.

Airport Director Richard Heath told Airport Commissioners that both complaints had been answered, and that he does not expect any action from SEC.

California's Air Resources Board, through staff attorney Leslie Krinsk, described the airport completion work as "environmentally unacceptable" on air quality considerations. He said the airport promotes and expands high levels of air pollution.

Federal environmental impact reports have consistently denied or ignored this claim, airport officials said.

The citizens group complaint from San Francisco Tomorrow alleged that the bond sale was improper because it had been advertised to San Francisco voters as having an interest cost of $83 million instead of the actual cost of $136 million.

Controller John Farrell told Airport Commissioners that the difference results from estimating a year ago that the airport could obtain $90 million at 6 percent average interest over 30 years. Instead, he said the airport will be paying 6.3 percent over 34 years.

Since the money all comes out of airport income, said one observer, it will cost the city's voters not one cent either way.

Once they had approved the bond sale commissioners called for bidding on a new industrial waste treatment plant to be financed by the bond money.

The work includes construction of six pumping stations plus the new treatment plant, and is expected to take 406 calendar days to complete.

Commissioners also called for bids on taxiway guidance systems and a security office between the North and Central Terminals.

They approved $100,000 worth of changes in construction of the Central Parking Garage but withheld action on a $65,000 change order because of a legal dispute.

$7 Million to SamTrans for Equipment

A check for nearly $7 million was to be presented to the San Mateo County Transit District today toward the purchase of 120 new buses, 100 bus shelters and some related equipment.

The capital outlay grants, for $6,083,924 and $800,000, are part of a $7,774,400 application by the district Dec. 21, 1977 for federal-urban transit money.

The funds will pay 80 percent of the cost of the buses, shelters, 200 bus stop signs and service and maintenance equipment. The rest must be paid from local revenues.

Some of the new new buses likely will be the 60-foot articulated models for which the district got so much publicity last fall when it unveiled its future fleet planning. The articulated buses, about half again as long as the present new buses, would hinge in the middle to negotiate traffic.

SamTrans Marketing Director James Gallagher said no date had been set for calling for bids on the new equipment.

Somewhere Lies a Giant Pumpkin That Dreams of Empire!

By JANET PARKER

Lurking out there somewhere in the bright orange pastures of Half Moon Bay is the Grand Poobah of Pumpkins.

Pampered from seed to harvest, the mammoth orange trophy is shrouded in a Coastside fog of secrecy. Stalking the beast is tricky, since the pumpkin pandemonium is much more than just a game for kids. Much.

Those who have the "big pumpkin" secret are envied. Those who don't have it want it so bad they can taste that pumpkin pie.

"The big pumpkin is a mystery to me," admitted Hank Pastorino. By the wave of some magic wand, his Pumpkin Factory on Highway 92 has become a produce growers' Disneyland.

"If I could grow one that big, I would. I just don't know how they do it," he said with a disgruntled shrug.

In just about a month, that Pumpkin-of-all-Pumpkins will emerge at the weigh-in amid the "oohs" and "aahs" of envious farmers saying, "I wonder how he did it."

Three Half Moon Bay pumpkin growers — with three very different approaches to the celebrated business — told their versions of pumpkinmania preparations this week.

One of them proudly professed his secret and then defied his competitors to take advantage of his generosity.

Like Christmas, pumpkin time in Half Moon Bay seems to be getting earlier every year. It was only Sept. 14, but already truckloads of pumpkins ripe off the vine were pouring into the fields near town where children from 2 to 82 will make their painstaking selection.

Contrary to popular opinion, pumpkins don't grow on trees. Pumpkins don't just sprout overnight, packed together like sardines, along highways near town.

No, says Pastorino, the farmers of Half Moon Bay really do grow their own, but mostly in fields outside town.

"This is my best crop in eight years," related Pastorino, a San Brunan who for the two months leading up to Halloween thrusts all his energy into the colorful pumpkin business.

You can see him outside near the family greenhouses, hammering away at gazebos, ladders, fences and displays. He was an architecture major in college.

Pastorino wasn't sure he approved when the pumpkinmania really began to gain momentum seven or eight years ago.

"I used to laugh. I'd see these guys out here with their pumpkins and I'd think, 'What a kick in the pants,'" he said. Now, he's more wrapped up in the Halloween festivities than anyone.

All the farmers, he explained, plant their pumpkin crop near the end of April or in early May. They hope for a bit of rain early in the planting cycle and then pray for no rain through the long months of growing. Pumpkins do well with very little water, Pastorino noted. The one brief weekend downpour earlier this month was enough. Another rain like that, he pointed out, would cause pumpkins waiting on the ground to mildew.

Pastorino, who frankly admits he has a high school botany teacher working on the breeding of a big pumpkin, said the Half Moon Bay competition is no joking matter.

"It's going to be a close one this year. It's a fierce competition. It's lucky we even wave to each other when we drive by."

He rushes into the office and emerges with the annual scrapbook. He points to a picture of patrons lined up just to get into the field and select their favorite pumpkin. . . the first time a backup ever happened.

"I'm kind of proud of that," he glowed.

Just next door, farmer Ray Chiesa is taking a more casual approach to the pumpkin puffery. But, his small field (only about 4,000 pumpkins) is one of the few on Highway 92 where the bright orange vegetable is sold in the same spot it's grown.

He doesn't see 1978 as a banner year for the Half Moon Bay pumpkins, but then, he admits, he's not really the local expert since he has barely an acre of the celebrity crop.

However, since he had the local prize last year — a pumpkin weighing in at 200 pounds — other farmers have their eye on his product.

"It's gotten to the point now where this pumpkin festival is really blown up," Chiesa said, noting that his family's G. Berta & Sons farm has harvested the same acreage of pumpkins for 30 years.

"For some it's a big thing, but for us it's not much. It has helped the downtown area a lot," he contended.

Most of his specimens this year are of the small variety. Prices this year will probably be up a bit, he said, although it's a flexible sort of market.

"If I sell it at one price, my wife would sell it at another price and my mother-in-law would sell it at still another price," he pointed out.

The larger farms plant a field of the pie-eating pumpkin, the Connecticut, and separate fields of the monsters, the Big Macs and the Big Toms.

"Eighty percent of the people who come here want to see the big ones," Pastorino related. "Americans just think big about everything — big cars, big houses. I guess there's nothing wrong with that."

John Minaidis isn't making any wild guesses. He's sure, though, that he has the biggest pumpkin this year. Just how big, he's not saying.

"I don't want to predict anything yet because it's still growing," he said while driving to one of his fields two miles south of town.

He only lost the competition to Chiesa last year because he got a bit too anxious, he said. "If you cut it too early, it loses weight. It'll shrink a few pounds," he said. That's what happened to his would-be champ last year, he said.

For Minaidis, of Tom and Pete's Farm, pumpkin growing has gone far beyond being a mere sideline. He expects to produce 4,000 to 5,000 tons — about 900,000 of the prospective jack-o-lanterns this year. Most of the crop will be sold to large supermarket chains.

The farmers, he noted, rotate the fields every three years or so. If you saw pumpkins growing in one place a few years back, chances are you'll find sprouts or beans there this year.

The secret of the big pumpkin, Minaidis claimed, is in the seed.

"The ones I plant for big ones, I bring the seed I get in Greece," said the farmer whose license plate proudly proclaims "IMGREEK." He said said when he left Greece as a teen-ager, pumpkins were abundant. He went back four years ago and brought some seeds home.

And — Half Moon Bay pumpkin pushers, beware. Minaidis is returning to the Greek island of Chios after this year's festivities are over.

"I don't think any of the farmers here have any relatives there. Maybe I bring back a bigger one yet," he said with a grin.
